Second International Conference on Therapeutic Jurisprudence

The Glenn Weaver Institute of Law and Psychiatry at the University of Cincinnati College of Law and the Fetzer Institute are pleased to announce the Second International Conference on Therapeutic Jurisprudence to be held May 3–5, 2001, in Cincinnati, Ohio. The conference will provide a forum for lawyers, educators, judges, and other interested persons to explore the many dimensions of the blossoming field of study known as therapeutic jurisprudence (TJ) and to create a dialogue among practitioners and advocates of TJ and related fields.

About Therapeutic Jurisprudence

Therapeutic jurisprudence focuses on the law’s distinct impact on emotional life and psychological well-being. TJ recognizes that, know it or not, like it or not, the law itself functions as a therapeutic agent. TJ embraces a multidisciplinary approach to examine the effects of rules of law, legal procedures, and the roles of legal and law-related actors on the psychological well-being of persons impacted by the law.

TJ’s multidisciplinary emphasis is reflected in the numerous collaborations among scholars from the fields of criminology, psychology, sociology, philosophy, counseling, psychiatry, social work, and, of course, law. TJ has attracted a wide international audience, and the First International Conference on Therapeutic Jurisprudence was held at the University of Southampton in Winchester, England, in July 1998. Additional information and a complete bibliography of therapeutic jurisprudence scholarship can be found at www.therapeuticjurisprudence.org

About the Glenn Weaver Institute of Law and Psychiatry

Established in 1998 in conjunction with a generous gift from Glenn M. Weaver, M.D., a longtime Adjunct Professor of Law at the College of Law, the Weaver Institute seeks to bring together students and faculty whose interests involve issues at the intersection of law and psychiatry and mental health law generally. Mental health clinicians have long recognized that the terms “mental illness” and “mental health” embrace different conceptions of distinct, yet related, areas of practice and study. However, it was not until the development of therapeutic jurisprudence as a distinct, yet related, field of inquiry from mental health law that legal professionals were able to recognize the applicability of this long-standing clinical distinction in the law. The Weaver Institute is very pleased to sponsor the Second International Conference on Therapeutic Jurisprudence as part of its ongoing effort to promote multidisciplinary collaboration among the mental health professions, the social sciences, and the law.

About the Fetzer Institute

The Fetzer Institute is a nonprofit, private operating foundation that supports research, education, and service programs exploring the integral relationships among body, mind, and spirit. The Institute has a special interest in how individuals and communities are influenced by the interactions among the physical, psychological, social, and spiritual dimensions of life, and how understandings in these areas can improve health, foster growth, and better the human condition. The Fetzer Institute is pleased to sponsor the Second International Conference on Therapeutic Jurisprudence as part of its recent efforts to promote healing through the law.

Navajo Therapeutic Jurisprudence
Thursday, May 3 • 1:30–2:40 p.m.

Hozhooji naat’annii, or Navajo peacemaking, is the traditional Navajo approach of dispute resolution, which is related to traditional Navajo healing concepts. It was reinstitutionalized in the judicial system of the Navajo Nation in 1982, and it has evolved to a more consciously-traditional model, which can be adapted to a wide range of social problems, including family violence, drug and alcohol dependence, alcohol-related crime, delinquency, and other problems. This presentation will suggest that indigenous approaches to healing and law are a model for the therapeutic jurisprudence movement.

The Honorable Robert Yazzie is the Chief Justice of the Navajo Nation. He has a degree in sociology from Oberlin College in Ohio and holds a law degree from the University of New Mexico School of Law. The Chief Justice is noted for his advocacy of the use of traditional Indian law and Hozhooji Naat’annii. He has formulated a “Healing and Community Justice” policy for the Courts of the Navajo Nation. Chief Justice Yazzie is also an adjunct professor in the Department of Criminal Justice at Northern Arizona University, is on the editorial board of Law & Religion, and is a former member of the Commission on White House Fellows.

James W. Zion is the Solicitor of the Courts of the Navajo Nation and an adjunct professor in the Department of Criminal Justice at Northern Arizona University. He holds a bachelor of arts degree from the University of Saint Thomas, and a Juris Doctor degree from the Columbus School of Law, Catholic University of America. He wrote the original court rules for Navajo peacemaking, and has published many articles on traditional Indian law, substantive aspects of traditional Navajo law, and the international human rights of Indigenous Peoples.

Nathalie Des Rosiers

Using TJ in Law Reform
Friday, May 4 • 1:30–2:40 p.m.

It can be argued that a TJ approach is necessary to any enterprise of law reform. Professor DesRosiers will examine law reform questions in criminal law, constitutional law, family law, and social policy to illustrate how law reformers often make unchallenged assumptions about the psychological impact of their proposals. It is often the failure to use a TJ approach and the failure to have explored the indirect effects of law on the lives of people that can explain some past law reform failures. The benefit of TJ is to call into question the assumed psychological knowledge imbedded in law in order to have better evidence, and eventually better law reform. Suggestions as to the possible implications in terms of data gathering and project analysis of recognizing the potential for TJ analysis of law reform efforts will be offered.

Nathalie Des Rosiers is President of the Law Commission of Canada and a Professor of Law at the University of Western Ontario. Her research and teaching interests are in constitutional law, environmental law, tort law, and the area of law and social issues. Professor Des Rosiers is a Past-President of the Association des juristes d’expression française de l’Ontario and of the Canadian Law Teachers Association, as well as member of the Environmental Appeal Board and the Ontario Law Reform Commission. Professor Des Rosiers obtained an LL.B. from the Université de Montréal and an LL.M. from Harvard University. She became a member of the Barreau du Québec in 1982 and the Law Society of Upper Canada in 1987.

John Braithwaite

Restorative Justice and Therapeutic Jurisprudence
Saturday, May 5 • 1:30–2:40 p.m.

Therapeutic jurisprudence is about making legal choices that enhance the psychological well-being of individuals without compromising the core values of the justice system. Restorative justice may have a slightly more radical agenda, but in most fundamental ways, restorative justice and therapeutic jurisprudence are compatible. Restorative practices illuminate strategies for achieving therapeutic outcomes. Professor Braithwaite will discuss Thomas Scheff’s program of restorative justice and therapeutic jurisprudence, attending to the role of shame acknowledgment and shame displacement in justice processes.

John Braithwaite is a Professor at the Research School of Social Sciences, Australian National University. He works on business regulation and criminal justice, particularly restorative justice, and is a prolific author and winner of several international awards. Professor Braithwaite served as a part-time Commissioner on the Trade Practices Commission, Australia’s national antitrust and consumer protection agency and on the Economic Planning Advisory Council, chaired by the Prime Minister. His forthcoming books are Restorative Justice and Responsive Regulation and Shame Management Through Reintegration.

Open Space Session
On Saturday, May 5, a two-hour block of time has been designated from 10:10 A.M. to 12:10 P.M. as “Open Space.” The concept of Open Space reflects our belief that all conference participants represent a rich resource of knowledge, skills, and experience. The Open Space process allows conference participants to share these resources with others and to join together in a dialogue that interests them.

The flexible nature of the process is conducive to less structured and formal discussions than those in concurrent sessions, and the open-ended nature of the process allows for strands of discourse and investigation that were perhaps not anticipated at the beginning of the conference. Participants might, for instance, convene a group to further explore a keynote address or concurrent session presentation, or choose a topic or dilemma not addressed at other points in the conference. Poster session presentations are encouraged during this time period as well.

Open Space provides a structure within which the needs and wants of each participant are valued, as each person is encouraged to become an active participant in those conversations and dialogues which are of greatest interest to them. As you attend the conference presentations, please consider specific questions or issues related to TJ that you might wish to explore.

TJ Film Festival
Throughout the conference, we will be screening a number of videos and films that are related to TJ or offer TJ-related insights. Some of the films are documentaries describing TJ or TJ-inspired programs; others are full-length feature films used by legal educators to illuminate the law’s impact on our psychological well-being. A moderator will be present for many of these video presentations to discuss the themes in the film and to answer any questions that might arise. The videos will run during the concurrent sessions for the conference. A complete schedule will be made available on the Web site.

General Information

Cincinnati is a charming city with many of the attributes of a large city combined with the friendliness and accessibility of a smaller city. There is a wide variety of museums and galleries, performing arts presentation, and fine dining. The weather in May is pleasant, with temperatures ranging between 70–85°F (21–30°C). Cincinnati is served by several international airlines, and direct flights are available from major European cities and Japan. Additionally, you may want to explore flight arrangements in and out of Dayton, a 50-minute drive from Cincinnati.

The Conference will be held at the Marriott Kingsgate Conference Center, 151 Goodman Drive, located just 3 miles from downtown Cincinnati on the campus of the University of Cincinnati. A block of rooms has been reserved at Kingsgate Conference Center at a special conference rate of $87 plus tax, single or double. Please make your reservation by calling 888.720.1299 or 513.487.3800 and identify yourself as a participant of the Therapeutic Jurisprudence Conference. After April 12, rooms will be available on a space and rate available basis. Kingsgate is a 25-minute drive (non rush hour) from the Greater Cincinnati/Northern Kentucky International Airport. Transportation information will be sent with the registration confirmation letter.

Fees
The conference registration fee is $295 and includes conference materials, continental breakfast and lunch on Friday and Saturday, dinner on Thursday, and dinner at the Cincinnati Zoo on Friday. One day registration fees are available as follows: $95 Thursday, $150 Friday, $150 Saturday. One day fees do not include dinner. All fees must be paid in U.S. funds only.

Refund Policy
If you register for the conference and find you cannot attend, you will receive a full refund by calling 513.558.1810 or e-mailing univconf@ucmail.uc.edu by April 25, 2001. No refunds will be processed after this date. Substitutions may be made at any time.

Continuing Legal Education
Application has been submitted for 10.5 hours (Thursday–2.5 hours, Friday–5.25 hours, Saturday–3 hours) of CLE credit in Ohio for the TJ Conference. Questions concerning Ohio CLE credit should be directed to Peggy Ramey, Dean’s office, University of Cincinnati College of Law (513.556.0063). Persons wishing to receive CLE Credit for other states should forward proof of attendance and conference materials to their state bar associations. The requirements and number of CLE credit hours for other states may vary, and participants should consult their state bar association. If you wish to request CLE credit, please indicate on the registration form.
